A MESSAGE FROM YOUR PRESIDENT

Now that our second annual seminar is behind us, we can once again settle down in a little calmer atmosphere. The seminar was a huge success and was enjoyed by all who attended. We had attendees from as far away as Jacksonville and of course one friend of Mrs. Lorna Rosbottom's who came from Illinois. Both Mrs. Rosbottom and Dr. Nils Olsson spoke on the most interesting subjects and they held their audience spellbound. For those of you who were unable to attend, most of the talks were recorded and the cassettes will be in the Genealogical Department of the Orlando Public Library. There are three cassettes and they may be checked out like a book for your listening at home.

Preparations have begun to hold an all-day workshop for beginners in late spring. Be on the lookout for further details. If you have any ideas on beginner workshops, please contact our Workshop Chairman, Bonnie Ward, either at her home or at the Orlando LDS Library.

Our near-future aim is to coordinate all of our annual anniversaries such as fiscal year, publications year and membership year. We are studying the problem now and hope to be ready to present a plan to the membership before we adjourn for the summer recess.

Other future plans include several Society publications including a Surname Index, Compilation of Pedigree Charts and a booklet on Publishing Your Family History. Dorothy Westenhofer, chairman of the Publications Committee, is coordinating the effort. Be on the lookout for further details and be prepared to submit the necessary data to fill the needs. The cooperation of all of our members is needed to make such undertakings a success. The publications will be of such a nature as to be in demand throughout the land. They will also bring to those who include their data a return of information from others who will at last have found the connection with which they had been searching.

This is our last Buried Treasures before we begin our summer recess, so have a good one and for those of you who will be traveling in search of roots, have a good hunt and drive carefully. We want to hear about your findings next fall.

Julius W. (Joe) Ryals

Any book or pamphlet on genealogy, if widely distributed in fireproof buildings which are owned by municipalities and supported by public tax, will endure longer than a marble tombstone in a graveyard, costing less, and telling a thousand times more. Looking at it any way you choose, a published genealogy is better than a gravestone.

Los Angeles Public Library

The following article entitled "Cherokee Collection" by Lisa Zadick was excerpted from the Fall, 1981 issue of The University of Tennessee Alumni Magazine:

"The Cherokee nation reached an advanced state with a high literacy rate. They printed newspapers, almanacs and hymnals in both English and Cherokee because they were read by whites as well as Indians. The 300-piece collection (of Cherokee documents) contains a bound volume of original copies of the Cherokee newspaper, The Phoenix, from 1828-1834. Printed in North Georgia, the newspaper circulated throughout the Cherokee nation and its surrounding areas. . . . A complete run of Cherokee almanacs of the years 1836-1860 are also in the collection. The Cherokees began publishing almanacs in Park Hill, Indian Territory (present day Oklahoma) when they moved to the West."

This would be an invaluable aid for those researching Cherokee, and possibly Creek and other Southeastern Indian, family lines. This collection is located in the Special Collections Library of the University of Tennessee Library on the Knoxville campus.

Thank you, Tanya Miller

ECTOPISTES MIGRATORIUS?

"The passenger pigeon (ectopistes migratorius), native to Eastern North America, became extinct in 1914. In the pre-Revolutionary period, the forests contained millions of these birds. The largest flock observed was in Kentucky, and measured over 100 miles in length."

IN MEMORIAM
REV. GREEN MARSHALL KENDRICK

Green Marshall Kendrick was born in Wilkes Co., Ga., September 2nd, 1834. He became personally acquainted with our Lord Christ Jesus as a personal Savior in the early days of his young manhood. He joined the Methodist Church and was at once licensed to preach. In 1851, at the age of seventeen, he was happily married to Miss Olivia Stovall. This union was blessed with a large and happy family of children.

In 1898, in the city of Augusta, his excellent wife, who had for many years sweetened and blessed his life and contributed largely to his usefulness and the happiness of his home, preceded him to Heaven. His grief and loneliness were unspeakable. In 1901 he was again happily married to Miss Ada E. Storey, who blessed him with her womanly virtues and faithful ministries until last January 11th. At that date, in the parsonage of the South Georgia Methodist Orphans' Home, he passed to his reward.

Bro. Kendrick was a good man. He was active, strong, true and useful. He lived well, died at his post, and leaves as a heritage to his family and friends: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." His heredity and environment favored this; God willed it; and under grace and a good Providence he wrought out a character and life that will continue to bless mankind.

His childhood began its course toward the noble manhood into which it issued, in the neighborhood of old Mt. Zion Methodist Church in the South-eastern corner of Wilkes. Let evil men say what they will, the pure light that shines on the altars of a true Christian Church, and the high ideals that are exhibited there, have much to do with the aspirations and life of the adjacent homes. This man sprang from excellent ancestry. In his veins was the blood of revolutionary heroes. His fathers shared with his fellow countrymen toils, perils, sufferings and losses of that mighty struggle for American independence and reaped with them in the glory of its results. What results? Not solely or mainly the right of civil self-government handed down to posterity, but a strong and noble manhood flowing down in streams of glorious life to their children, enriching them with a large capacity for virtuous and sturdy life. Any man can be a gentleman. To some this is easy by nature. It was so with the youth of the old Kendrick home down in the corner of Wilkes Co. To be sanguine, spirited, generous, free, was as natural to him as for the mountain eagle to perch upon its tallest peaks, or for the leaping brook to seek ocean associations. Of vigorous mind and body, bent to gentility by nature, the associations of a good family and superior citizenry surrounding, furnished the other conditions which under grace and a good Providence wrought out in him an admirable manhood. Financial sufficiency made the practice of the generous virtues of a hospitality and charity as convenient as they were pleasing to his heart. Freely he had received and freely his hand moved in friendly generosity towards others. He did not know how to restrict himself in outlay for the comfort of himself, his family and his friends. A free hand spent his fortune too soon for his comfort, but perhaps not too soon for his usefulness.

Financial needs made constant industry necessary to meet the requirements of a large family and a heart that wished to be generous. Teaching was his lifetime profession. Preaching was his lifetime avocation. He preached to save and edify souls, he taught to meet his obligations in finance. When the results of the Civil War and a too free use of his means made him poor, the battle of his life was on him. But perhaps that which embarrassed him was sanctified to thrust him into two strategic points of usefulness. In the schoolroom and pulpit a good man's life ought to rise to the highest vantage for usefulness as well as personal development. He taught in many places. When the summons came he was teaching the children of the South Georgia Orphans' Home. In the pulpit he was clear, strong, evangelical and effective. During most of his adult life he preached without compensation. He belonged to a class of local preachers who served the church and their Lord not for pay but for love.

Part of the time, giving his whole energy to pulpit and pastoral ministry he was supported by the churches which he served. At other times he served well and supported himself. For the strength and effectiveness of his ministry he ranked very high. His own experience of grace was definite and full of comfort. He spoke out of a heart into which He had shined, "who commanded light to shine out of darkness. His trumpet gave no uncertain sound."

Though a local preacher of a very large family, he had a Conference history that compares well with that of many of the best traveling preachers. He served on the Hancock Circuit with Rev. G. H. Patillo and afterward, as preacher in charge there, for a number of years. Antioch Church sprang from a bush arbor meeting that he held in the western part of that county. North Georgia Methodism and Christianity in that part of the State owe gratitude for his most useful ministry and abiding love to his memory as an able and useful preacher. Late in life he took work as a supply within bounds of the South Georgia Conference where some of his children lived. A brother of that Conference writes me that down there he was rated high as an able preacher. When, with advancing age gray hairs crowned his head and infirmities weakened his body, his soul mellowed and sweetened like ripening fruit. How appropriate for a sweet-spirited, aged man or woman to teach and preach to orphan children! How excellent the providence that puts a good man in such work and association just before his ascension! No wonder, when his physician told him to be very careful, as he was liable to die at any moment, he could say: "I am not afraid to die." "SERVANT OF GOD WELL DONE."

THE TRINKLE FAMILY

The First Trinkles of record in America arrived in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on November 9, 1738, in the ship "Charming Nancy", commanded by Commander Charles Stedman from Rotterdam. A part of the great Palatine Emigration from the Rhineland of Germany. Among the 200 passengers there were listed 62 as being men and heads of families. This list contained the names of Christoph Trenkel and John Stephen Trenkel. These two men, together with whatever family they had settled in the Winchester, Virginia area, probably had friends already there. Christoph Trenkel was senior, and very likely, John Stephen's father. However, nothing concerning him has been found after his arrival in Philadelphia. John Stephen Trenkel, on the other hand, seems to have been well thought of, and established in the Winchester community. The Stoevers Records dated July 8, 1739, show him as being one of the sponsors at the baptism of a son of George Adam Heyl at Moesennutton, Virginia, and then again on the sixteenth of April, 1764, in Winchester, he is listed among the 33 founders, when the corner stone of the Evangelical Lutheran Church was laid by Johann Casper Kirchner.

John Stephen Trenkel was married to Catherine _____?, probably before they left Germany. The only known reference to her is an item from Christian Straits Diary, page 337, dated May 2, 1786, "Buried Catherine Trenkel, age 76, and rode up to Cape Capon." Catherine is buried in the old Lutheran Cemetery at Mt. Habron near Winchester.

John Stephen and Catherine have been established as the first Trinkle family in America. Unfortunately, very little information has been found relating to this early family, due largely to the very hard and unsettled conditions they had to content with in making a living and establishing homes. At a time when families were usually large, only two children have been found that could have belonged to John Stephen and Catherine. These are Michael and Christopher. Again referring to Christian Straits Diary, page 539, June 16, 1786, "Young people who announced themselves for instruction on Whitsunday 1786 at Steins":

Margaret, age 17

Michael, age 16

Catherine, age 14

their father Michael Trinkel

Christopher Trinkle, probably named after his grandfather Christoph Trenkel, was born in 1752, Winchester, Virginia, and died August 16, 1829, in Hardinsburg, Indiana. The records show he enlisted in the army in 1777 at Winchester for a five year term. He was assigned to the company of Captain C. Triplet, of the 6th Campbell Regiment, the First Virginia Volunteers. He served his time fully out and engaged in the following battles:

Brandywine
Camden

Rootsford
Gilford Court House

Utaca Springs
and others

He was discharged at Round Oak, South Carolina by Col. Campbell.

In 1776 Christopher married Elizabeth Weiser, daughter of Adam Weiser, another Palatine emigrant from Germany. They lived in the Winchester area until about 1790 when they and the Adam Weisers moved to what is now Pulaski County, Virginia, in and near Dublin. This move was probably influenced by the hard time the German immigrants had in getting clear deeds to land in northern Virginia. Both Adam Weiser and Christopher Trinkle secured land grants in then Montgomery County, Virginia, now Pulaski and near Dublin, signed by Governor James Monroe.

Elizabeth Weiser Trinkle died about 1812 and is buried in the Weiser Cemetery. In 1813, Christopher sold his land to his son, Stephen, and for reasons best known to himself, moved to Indiana. He purchased land and settled near Hardinsburg. He died there and is buried on the old Trinkle farm. The D. A. R. have erected a monument there to perpetuate his memory.

PENNSYLVANIA ADOPTEE INFORMATION

Over the last several years, there's been considerable attention devoted in various media to the subject of adopted children trying to find their biological parents. Many agencies have been receiving inquiries from adopted children about their "birth" parents and from birth parents about the children they relinquished for adoption. For many, it is an emotional issue. Testimony was given on this matter before the Senate Committee on Health and Welfare in October 1981.

There now exists The Adoption Forum in Philadelphia, a resource center that is set up to reunite birth parents and adoptees. Information concerning this Forum may be obtained through children service agencies in Pennsylvania.

If possible, it is always advisable to deal through that agency through whom the adoptee was placed. However, this is not always possible.

There is one agency in Pennsylvania which has adopted the following general policy:

"Adoptees contacting Tressler-Lutheran Service Associates, Inc. who were not affiliated with this agency and who were adopted through another source will be informed as to how to obtain their original birth certificates. Other than this information service, T-LSA will not be involved in assisting persons in the search process."

The address of this agency is:

2331 Market Street
Camp Hill, Pennsylvania 17011

When an American says that he loves his country, he means not only that he loves the New England hills, the prairies glistening in the sun, the wide and rising plains, the great mountains, and the sea. He means that he loves an inner air, an inner light in which freedom lives and in which a man can draw the breath of self-respect.

OLD WEST RIVER

"The right way to go to West River is by boat", said Roxana White. And it still is one of the most pleasant ways, but today you must have your own boat. The traditional way had been river ever since Stephen Stewart startled the shipbuilders of Anne Arundel County, Maryland by the first sideways launching of a boat from his yard at the narrow head of the river in the 18th century. But no longer do ships from Baltimore dock to land the young ladies bound for Miss Margaret Mercer's fashionable school at Cedar Park, or the later generations of young gentlemen going to Professor Chaney's Academy. The Emma Giles does not stop at Galesville wharf now to deposit vacationers, or freighters load hundreds of hogsheads of tobacco or bushels of peaches from the once large plantations and orchards.

You can see today how the automobile has changed West River. Produce goes overland and seafood in refrigerator trucks. It is mainly smaller pleasure craft on the old river today, but West River is an interesting place, and Ivy Neck, between West River and Rhode River is a good place to start, as one family has been there for five generations. James Cheston built the family home there in 1787, baked the soft red bricks from clay on his own farm. His wife was Ann Galloway, who built the nearby "Tulip Hill". Descendants still live at "Ivy Neck", and their name is Colhoun.

They of that family tell how ship's captains weren't always reliable in doing the London shopping for the West River ladies. If an order were accompanied by gold to pay for it, he weighed the list down with a piece of gold. Any that were not prepaid would just happen to blow out the porthole, and many was the disappointed customer when the captain returned and the silk dress was not received, having been counted on for so many weeks.

In 1780, James Cheston himself went to London. In the bookcase at Ivy Neck is the journal in which he recorded the shopping list given him by his wife. The long list included "a satin cloak and bonnet what as is most worn . . . 1 yard and 1 nail length of petticoat, and 6 pairs of Everlasting shoes." Surely the shoes must have been Everlasting, as in a wall some years ago when repairs were being made, they discovered such a pair, apparently having fallen through a space in the attic after having been discarded by their wearer.

Also found at West River is another shipyard, which was not meant to be a shipyard. Henry Hartge was a piano builder in Baltimore, who had a young apprentice named Knabe. Later Hartge moved to Shady Side, on the opposite bank of West River from the present yard at Galesville, and he and his sons continued making beautiful rosewood square pianos. A century ago the Hartge pianos had a wide reputation, but they are scarce now, and the family of Captain Oscar Hartge is rejoicing at having at last gotten one of their ancestor's pianos, which stood for ninety years in the parlor of a West River family.

The late Captain Emile A. Hartge, the father of Oscar and Ernest, the present shipbuilders (1940), was more interested in making sailboats than musical instruments. Seventy-three years ago, when he was 18, he built his first log canoe, the Northern Light, under a mulberry tree in his father's yard, and from that he went to the Mollie B. The William V. Wilson, the first boat ever built of yellow poplar was from that taken from a tree in the Hartge yard. This vessel won a silver racing trophy, but the poplar proved not to be as good as pine used for other log canoes, so this wood was used. Later oak trees from the Hartge grove were used, and added to the reputation of these builders. Today the Hartge knockabouts have won trophies in many races, including the President's Cup Regatta at Washington, D. C.

Needless to say, Mr. Knabe went on with the piano business, but he began in West River, Maryland.

GENEALOGICAL AIDS IN THE GLOVE COMPARTMENT OF YOUR CAR?

(. . . Believe it or not!)

An article published in The University of Tennessee Alumni Magazine (Fall, 1981) entitled "Tennessee Maps" has enlightened me as to the value of the "common" road map in genealogical research. The article, written by Martin Burkey, considers road maps to be a highly valuable resource for geologists, historians and genealogists.

The author cites the value of the map collection in the University of Tennessee Libraries in the study of Tennessee History. Some of the nearly 250 maps in the Special Collections Library date back to the late 1700's and early 1800's. These maps "show the development of counties, towns and railroads as well as patterns of settlement. Other features are Indian town and territories, military reservations, the Cumberland Road, the Natchez Trace, postal routes, and distances by stagecoach and steamboat."

This is considered "the most complete collection of Tennessee maps in existence." It contains "80% of the 19th century maps and 90% of 18th century maps of the area now known as Tennessee . . . On some, the state is spelled 'Tennassee,' and on others the area is in the 'Southwest Territory' or part of North Carolina." Most of the maps are authentic originals, and contain the handwriting of original surveyors, settlers, and/or map makers.

The collection is located in the Special Collections Library of the University of Tennessee Library on the Knoxville campus.

This has prompted me to dig into the glove compartment of my car and properly fold my new found "treasures." Better start saving those gas station road maps . . . who knows what changes may occur in the next two hundred years!

CHARLES C. POLLARD'S CIVIL WAR DIARY

In the family papers of Bill Goddard's family, there is the Diary of Expeditions of the 5th Massachusetts Regiment during nine months service, 1862-1863, by Charles C. Pollard, a private of Company E of that Regiment. As it is too lengthy to print in its entirety, following are some excerpts from the diary.

October 25, 1862 - Arrived at Moorehead, N. C. on board the steamship Mississippi after embarking from Boston. Many of the boys though strong in flesh were dreadfully weak in stomach and as a consequence paid the usual tribute to Neptune. Took the cars to Newberne, N. C. arriving there on the 27th of October where we sat up camp.

November 6, 1862 - After several skirmishes with the rebels, arrived in Williamston and on the second day spent the night in the splendid home of Judge Biggs, now a prisoner at Fort Warren, Boston Harbor. Later we marched to Plymouth and bivouacked at an "Old Secesh Place" and dug 200 bushels of sweet potatoes by hand and roasted them in the ground. Returned to Newberne November 12th.

December 11, 1862 - Left camp at 6 a.m. and marched continuously all day and part of second day finally halting at 7 p.m. This made the boys think that "all marchee and no fightee was pretty touch soldiering." After marching the next morning, halted at noon to make coffee and eat our "horse and shingles." After several days of fighting, General Foster announced that our target, Goldsboro had been taken. On the march back to Newberne, the band played the strains of "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

March 13, 1863 - Received marching orders from Newberne, but had to return the next day as the rebels had slipped down in cover of darkness and were shelling our camp. Old Hunchback, a gunboat lying in the river, was heavily armed and soon forced the rebels to retreat.

April 3, 1863 - Embarked at Fort Spinola for Washington, N. C. to relieve General Foster who was hemmed in there. Arrived two days later at the Pamlico River where the rebels had erected a very heavy battery at Hill's Point and defied all our efforts to pass. They withstood the battery of three of our gun boats so the river assault was abandoned and an overland march was planned led by General Spinola. He was a hot headed man who swore he would drive the entrenched rebels out and ordered an attack despite the objection of the other officers. He sent Capt. Belcher's battery ahead to engage the enemy, but unfortunately Capt. Belcher had his horse shot out from under him and received a severe wound in the thigh. Walking back unassisted, he urged us to give the "Butternuts" hell. General Foster finally ran the blockade at Hill's Point and arrived at Newberne on the steamer Escort. The Escort had received twenty-two shots and lost her pilot who was shot through the head while at his post.

May 21, 1863 - Left camp for Gore Creek by train at 6 a. m. As the rebels had heavy fortifications there, we were reinforced by the 25th and 46th Mass. and the 58th Penn. The rebels surrendered after four hours of heavy fighting and 200 prisoners were taken. On the march back, Company E was attacked by rebel cavalry and were forced to cut through a swamp to the railroad depot for transportation back to Newberne. The expedition was under the command of Col. Jones of the 58th Penn. who was killed by the rebels who had followed them back to Batcheller's Creek and had shot the colonel while his regiment was on picket duty.

June 20, 1863 - Orders received to break camp and return to Boston. Embarked on the steamer Guide at Moorehead Landing and then orders were received to proceed to Fortress Monroe, Va. "I suspect that the excitement in Pennsylvania, of which we have heard, has something to do with that order but it is the soldier's duty to obey and not ask questions". As we approached the mouth of the York and James Rivers, the steamer Convoy came out and signaled us to continue on to Boston. As we continue up the coastline the bands serenade us with tunes of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" and "John Brown's Body." On the 25th as we approach Boston, it seems good to once more be near our native hearth. As a whole, the old 5th has been wonderfully blessed by that "Kind Being Who Ruleth Over All Things."

On a farm 4 miles northeast of Wilbaur, Montana, a pile of sandstones was discovered about the size of a man's hand. They were turned over and found to be a form of grave marker.

John Dean 1791 - June 18, killed in the raid

Abe Dean 1791 - June 18, killed in the raid

Ben Dean [79] - killed in the raid

Mary Dean 1791 - killed in the raid

George Pike 1791 - killed in the raid

John Pike 1791 - killed in the raid

Rev. Neil 1791 - killed in the raid

Mary Watson 1791 - killed in the raid

James Mead, 1790 killed late in the fall of October.

The farm was owned by Leslie Baird and family in 1965. One stone says:

"planted beans on May 10."

Another stone: killed 3 red skins on high ground.

No settlement seems to be recorded in Montana as early as 1790. Perhaps they were all "killed in the raid" or soon thereafter. This was long before the gold rush of 1849. Any survivors may have pushed on west.

In the new code of laws, which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies, and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors. Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could.

SWEDISH AMERICAN GENEALOGIST

Americans of Swedish descent now have an invaluable aid in tracing their early ancestors in America. In March, 1981, the first issue of the Swedish American Genealogist was published by Dr. Nils William Olsson. This quarterly is devoted to Swedish American biography, genealogy and personal history. Dr. Olsson, a Central Florida Genealogical and Historical Society, Inc. member is also the editor. Five contributing editors, Glen E. Brolander, Sten Carlsson, Carl-Erik Johansson, Henric Sollbe and Erik Wiken offer other excellent sources and contributions.

The first issue contains several interesting and helpful articles. One is a review of an 1880 publication by Eric Johnson and C. F. Peterson. This volume, Swedes in Illinois, contains almost one thousand biographies of early Swedish settlers in Illinois. Another article points out the use of Naturalization documents to trace early ancestors and others suggest the use of Bibles and artifacts brought to this country by immigrants as a prime source of genealogy research. There is also an outstanding article on Swedish Surnames. This should be a must on the list of all Swedish American Genealogists.

A year's subscription is $12.50 and runs for the calendar year. Single copies are $5.00 each. Contributions are welcome and queries are printed free of charge to subscribers only. The address is:

THE SWEDENBORGIAN CHURCH IN CROSSVILLE, TENNESSEE

One of the American Bicentennial Events sponsored by the Crab Orchard Chapter of the DAR, the Ford-Narramore Chapter of the SAR and the descendants of Samuel Cline was the dedication of a memorial marker on the site of the Church of New Jerusalem, Swedenborgian built in 1879-1880 in Cumberland County, Tennessee.

The building was constructed by Samuel Cline who came to the wilderness known as the Cumberland Plateau in 1870 from Indiana. He settled in Northville and built a sawmill, steam grist mill, opened a stone quarry and post office. The marker is set on a stone from his quarry. He built a large three story house for his family and lived there until his death in 1916. The main speaker at the dedication ceremonies was Morris C. Bishop a member of the Caloosa Chapter of the SAR in Ft. Myers, Florida and a descendant of Samuel Cline.

Samuel Cline became interested in the teachings of Emanuel Swedenborg, a Swedish scientist, philosopher and theologian of the 1700's. Around 1750 Swedenborg said he had a vision and wrote many books on his system of theology and special interpretation of the Trinity. Although Swedenborg never built a church, his teachings had many followers in both Europe and America. During the 1870's, a Swedenborg missionary, Rev. J. P. Smith, came occasionally to meet with Samuel Cline and others such as Judge Charles Snodgrass and C. E. Brookhart. They formed a church society and in 1879-1880, Samuel Cline built a small building to house the church. For more than a quarter of a century, the building served as a place of worship for several churches as well as a community center. In 1908, the building was remodeled into a residence and the property was deeded to Schuyler C. Cline, youngest son of Samuel and Mary Cline, where he resided until his death. His wife sold the property in 1945 and it has changed hands several times. The present owners are Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Simmons who purchased it in 1973. The house is located at 111 West Adams Street in Crossville, Tennessee. - submitted by Eileen B. Willis (abstracted by Mary J. Ryals from articles published in the Crossville Chronicle at the time of the Bicentennial presentation.)

CREED

OUR LIVES are the gift of our many antecedents

OUR GOALS are to perpetuate their names and activities

*OUR LABOR is to gather and

OUR LOVE to extend both backward and forward, so that

OUR CHILDREN may feel close to their folk and their land.

OUR DUTY is to share all gathered information, while

OUR HOPE is to interest others and to assist each member.

'The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a Godly heritage.'

Psalms 16:6
