Thoughts from your Editor

As I've gathered information from our great CFGS members to put this issue together, I am amazed by the inter-connectivity of genealogy. Several months ago, we ran a pedigree of CFGS member, Carrie Boswell, highlighting her Hull family. Now we're running the descendants of Mary Phillips ancestor, Hugh Partin — and there among the descendants is Carrie's mother. Betty Robinson sent in her information on the Norment family who came to Orlando in the 1880s and built what is now the Norment/Parry Historic Inn (over which we drive when heading east on the East-West Expressway near downtown.) She lists the marriages of the Norment family — to Bumbys and Fishbacks. CFGS member Ann Bennett is a descendant of the Bumby family as well as a number of other early Orlando families. As I re-read the obituary of my great grandfather Charles Kieser, who was killed in 1919 (in a hit and run accident on Edgewater Drive) — the list of pallbearers includes a Bumby. As I'm extracting marriage, cemetery and census listing for publication — these names pop up regularly. After we've counted, married and buried them — I feel a personal relationship with all the early settlers of Orange County, even though mine were "johnny-come-latelys" in 1909.

It seems that no matter where we look in genealogy, we stumble over someone who has a connection. Ann Bergelt, in her talk at the workshop, mentioned that she had a great amount of information on the Cincinnati area. That's where my mother's folks came from — as did those of Paul Enchelmayer and several others of our members.

Often, at the Family History Center, the best source of information is that person sitting next to you — and you might find out about it by simply asking a question (or eavesdropping on their questions.) The Family Finder project of CFGS (currently being reworked by Judy Weinberg) is a way to find if anyone else in the society might be working on your lines. Don't forget to post your names on any of the surname sites on the Internet — I've had a number of distant cousins contact me through my listings there -- especially through the RootsWeb Surname List.

Remember, if we go back far enough, we're all related — keep asking around, the connection may be closer than the Ark.

The President Says

Dear Members and Friends:

Welcome to Buried Treasures, our premiere quarterly. This is my last President's Report, since my term as your President comes to a close with the May meeting. I would like to thank each one of you for the confidence and support that you have shown me as your President these past two years. I would like to thank my terrific Board Members: Betty Jo Stockton, Sim Seckbach, Mary Phillips, Ted Williams, Emma Minshew, Elaine Powell, Jane Keller, Joanne Telkamp, Rose Hogan, and Lynne Knorr; also last year's board members: Paul Enchelmayer, Martha Jean Burns, and Judy Weinberg. Each of these members has shown how valuable active society members can be to CFGS.

We welcome our new President, Sim Seckbach and his Board: 1st. Vice President, Betty Jo Stockton; 2nd Vice President, Martha Jean Burns; Recording Secretary, Emma Minshew; Corresponding Secretary, Mary Phillips; Treasurer, Gladys Friedman Paulin; Historian, Elaine Powell; and Directors: Paul Enchelmayer, Pat Prestin, and Rose Hogan. These active members make being your President a great opportunity to make our Society great.

It has been a changing and growing time for CFGS. We have tried new things like participating at the Central Florida Fair and developing the life membership classification. We continued new publications — organized, copied, walked and produced volume one of the Greenwood Cemetery Project. We had daytime meetings, had our summer dinners, continued our informative evening programs and developed full day seminars. We changed our meeting date so we could meet at Beardall Senior Center, changed the Bylaws to meet the needs of our society and developed a business like budget for the future.

We have worked as a partner with the Florida State Genealogical Society, Inc., assisting on some of their projects. We are now jointly planning and working so we can host the 25th annual conference in Orlando this November. I am so proud of what we have accomplished, but it is only with your help that the Society has prevailed.

Genealogy is an inclusive pursuit; we find family in our research and friends at our events. See you soon!

Larry

The Heatherington Poultry Farm in Fairvilla, Florida

CFGs member Claire Heatherington husband's family has been in the Fairvilla area of Orange County since the late 1800s. Claire and her husband Mark still live on the same property settled by his ancestors. As Claire was organizing family papers, she came across these "flyers" of the poultry farm established in 1913 — which was sold at auction about 1918 as M. W. Heatherington was drafted for World War I. He repurchased the property after returning from service in France. The Heatherington children are the fifth generation to live on this land.

We purchased our stock directly or indirectly from some of the best breeders in the country and each year we buy from any that we think might have better stock in any of the different breeds and find out.

All our breeding stock is trapnested and pedigreed cockerels from the best hens are used.

All our breeding stock is tested for Pullorum and as far as we know is free from this disease.

All our stock lay standard size eggs or larger. No small eggs are set.

Hatches weekly, ready for shipment Tuesday morning.

Live delivery guaranteed. Do not hesitate to send us your order. If we can not fill it your money will be returned. Our good name is worth more than the price of a few chicks.

You will find our chicks strong and easy to raise.

Farm located at Fairvilla. Visitors welcome.

Facts of Fairvilla Community
submitted by Claire Heatherington

Dairying, truck farming, poultry raising, the growing of Oranges, grapefruit and tangerines, combined with manufacturing are the substantial industries upon which Fairvilla is founded. With the founding of Orlando, the Fairvilla section, adjacent the city, became of importance.

Fairvilla is a community of prosperous and substantial business men who are interested in the soil and its products. Incidentally it is a residential community for employment or for business in Orlando, for the community joins the Orlando City Limits on the northwest.

Pride in community is one of the interesting things one meets in talking to the people of Fairvilla. This interest manifests itself in well kept places and an atmosphere of steady progress and prosperity. The proximity of the community to the city and the fact that its development is securely rooted in the soil gives it a permanency that is equal with that of Orlando and the State of Florida.

TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES, which are known to be one of the most essential assets of any community, Fairvilla boasts of having hard surfaced roads running in almost every direction. Included in these roads are the Fairvilla-Winter Garden Road, Henderson Drive, The Wittenstein Road and the State Highway No. 2, which is a Federal Aid Highway, running almost through the center of the community and parallel the Seaboard Railway and Big Lake Fairview from the Railway Station to a point about one and one-half miles north of the business center. Hundreds of Thousands of Tourists coming into the State through the Lake City Gate Way will see the Fairvilla section just before arriving in Orlando.

The Seaboard Railway furnishes to this community a high class service both in passengers and freight with the same switching services and charge that is afforded the city of Orlando.

The people of Fairvilla are deeply interested in their transportation advantages and the already completed agricultural and residential sections will be given a new incentive for still further development. The Fairvilla Chamber of Commerce is making comprehensive plans for beautification and greater expansion and development of the community as the improved Transportation facilities brings with them more complete accessibility and increasing numbers of people to see the picturesqueness as well as the real agricultural and industrial possibilities of this section.

Fairvilla is a complete community, with electricity for light and power, bus service, telephones and telegraph furnished from Orlando Stations. Its business section is small, because of the proximity to the City of Orlando, yet the Stores, the Filling Stations, the Garages serve adequately the needs. The public school has just been remodeled at a cost of approximately $10,000. This School is well located on East Main Street and is modern in every detail with Electric Lights and running water. This was the first school in Orange County to adopt the lunch room system many years ago and since its adoption almost every school in central Florida has experimented with the Idea and found it successful. The Fairvilla School has a corps of four competent teachers.

The Methodist Church is beautifully located just across the street from the school in a grove of tall spacious moss covered pines.

Industrial Fairvilla is represented by the location of the Cheney Art Tile Company, Walker Fertilizer Company Factory, The Fairvilla Charcoal Company, The Richards Cabinet Works, manufacturers of Archery supplies and boats.

The Cheney Art Tile Co. and the Walker Fertilizer Co., are frequently working over time to fill the demands for their products.

Dairying constitutes one of the more important interests of Fairvilla. Here is located the I. Shader and Sons Dairy, The Flatwoods Dairy, The R. D. Eunice Dairy, The College Park Dairy, The Harrell Dairy, The D. Aper Dairy, J. C. Johns Dairy, Bandy's Dairy, and Walker's Dairy. This community furnishes a very large portion of Orlando's milk supply. The above dairies are modernly equipped and run on a profitable basis.

Interest in poultry raising in Florida has increased materially during recent months, but Fairvilla has been profitably producing poultry and poultry products for years. The community does not boast of any large enterprises, but a number of fanciers have successfully raised chickens and disposed of their products at handsome prices. It is pointed out that this section is one of the more advantageous locations for poultry raising in this part of the state. Some of the leading poultry Farms here are Heatherington's Poultry Farm, The Engleside Poultry Farms and T. J. Page, and others.

The orange, grape fruit and tangerine growing industry constitutes one of the solid interests throughout the section. Many successful groves are located here. Dr. P. Phillips has 60 acres, W. A. Durrenherger 25 acres, I. Shader and Sons, 20 acres, J. D. Henderson, 20 acres, W. F. McCandless, 15 acres, Nydegger Investment Company 30 acres, R. W. Parr, 20 acres, R. D. Eunice, 15 acres, Sol Wittenstein, 25 acres, Donnell, 25 acres, and many others. The above includes only the bearing trees and does not include many young groves now set. Cooper-Atha-Barr Company operates an up-to-date nursery of Shrubbery and Flower Plants, while Scott Grover specializes in various bulbs and ferns.

The community of Fairvilla was originally named "Fairview" after Lake Fairview. The lake retains the name while the community has been rechristened "Fairvilla." The agricultural possibilities, in truck farming, dairying, poultry raising, or citrus growing, are limited only by the initiative and interest of those who come to join in working profitably and happily together. The fertility of the soil has been proved and the closeness to the city of Orlando gives to the community an advantage for marketing that few other communities of the state possess. As an industrial community the future is just as sure as Orlando and Florida become the home of more and more classifications of manufacturing.

RECREATION. Several lakes are located in this community including Bay Lake and Bird Island Lake. The most prominent being Big Lake Fairview considered one of Florida's most beautiful, with many approaches and a shoreline of about five miles, dotted with homes. Hard surfaced roads almost completely surrounding it. On the north shore Orlando-Apopka Road, on the south shore the Wittenstein Road, on the west shore the S. A. L. Ry, and State and Federal Aid Highway No 2. Big Lake Fairview is clear, deep and spring fed with motor boats, sail boats, kicker boats and canoes. Thousands of people take advantage of the white sand beaches for fishing, picnicing and aquatic sports.

On the southern shore of Lake Fairview is located one of the interesting natural phenomena [sic] of Central Florida. The Spouting Well, an intermittent geyser of cold, clear water. The well was dug for the purpose of providing a "control" for the water level in the lake. The drillers tapped the subterranean stream which carries off the water from the surface in quantities necessary to control the level of the lake. When the subterranean stream had been encountered at a depth of more than 400 feet, the waters of the lake rushed in, perhaps to emerge somewhere else as one of Florida's numerous springs. Then the unusual began to occur. Every few minutes the well ejects its water with a terrific roar, shooting the column more than one hundred feet into the air. Water then rushes into the hole, continuing to flow with the hissing of strong suction for several minutes. A slackening of the flow of the water, then a moment of stillness, then a deep rumble. Instantly the column of water begins to rise, followed by the explosion shooting the water to a great height.

When the lake is at a certain level, the well shoots at regular intervals. During low water as it usually is during the dry winter and spring seasons the explosions do not occur. A number of explanations have been offered. It is believed that air rushing into the well through the center of the casing causes through the whirling of the water as it enters becomes compressed until the compression must find an exit, which can only be through ejecting the entire column of water.

Fairvilla is an old established community with four to five hundred population, with many places of interest. The societies which are functioning at this time are the Fairvilla Chamber of Commerce, Needle Work Guild of America, The Girl's Four H Club, Missionary Society, Parent Teachers Assn, Boy Scouts and Fairvilla Athletic Association.

Just remember when looking for a new location that the Fairvilla community, with many advantages, joins the City of Orlando and without City Taxes. Inquiries respectfully solicited.

For further information please write, The Fairvilla Chamber of Commerce, Route 2, Orlando, or Orange County Chamber of Commerce, Orlando, Florida.

Can You Copyright Your Data?

By Dick Eastman - Eastman's Online Genealogy Column 11 Apr 2001

© About once a week or so I receive an e-mail from a person who feels "ripped off." Each e-mail comes from someone who spends a lot of time and effort collecting genealogy information about their ancestry and then decides to share it with others. Some time later, that person finds the same information re-posted elsewhere, apparently by someone else who "ripped off" the information from the first person. The usual questions are: "Is this legal? Can he do that?" and "Isn't my data copyrighted?"

There are numerous other questions about copyrights in the genealogy community. If I find information in a book, can I legally copy that information and then republish it elsewhere? How about looking up genealogy information on a CD-ROM disk and then sending the results to someone else? I also hear complaints about genealogy data being offered for free that later ends up on a CD-ROM disk being sold by a commercial company. Questions about copyrights arise time and again.

There are no quick and easy answers to these questions. However, we can examine the facts and the laws involved to at least narrow the discussion down a bit. I will focus only on copyright laws in the United States. The laws in other countries will probably be similar but obviously will vary in details.

First we have to define what is a copyright. A copyright is an exclusive right to reproduce a "work of authorship," to prepare derivative works, to distribute copies of the work, to perform the work, and to publicly display the work. A work of authorship must be "original" and must be fixed in a "tangible medium of expression" in order to be protected. Genealogy publications, both electronic and printed, generally fall into the "literary works" category.

The phrase "public domain" refers to all works that are not covered by copyright. This includes works that were never covered by copyright or any works on which the copyrights have expired.

All books, music and other works published in the United States before 1923 are public domain. If you have a copy of a genealogy book published before 1923, you may freely copy anything from that book and republish it. Items published from 1923 through 1977 were covered by copyrights if the author placed a clear copyright notice on the original work. Most books published in 1923 and later do display a copyright claim. Those copyrights lasted for 28 years, plus the copyright holder could obtain an extension for up to 67 additional years. Those works may or may not still be under copyright today. If the original copyright holder is now deceased, his or her heirs may have renewed the copyright. Therefore, you must be careful before copying data from works created in those years. Unfortunately, there is no central copyrights database to check.

In 1978, the U.S. copyright laws were changed in such a manner as to make almost everything copyrighted unless specifically released to the public domain by the author. While the wording of the law is a bit complex, the results are simple: you won't be able to copy that information for many years yet without the copyright holder's permission.

There is an excellent chart that explains when copyrighted works pass into the public domain. This chart was created by Dennis S. Karjala, Professor of Law, Arizona State University and can be found at www.progenealogists.com/copyright\_table.htm [a copy follows this article]

While data printed after 1978 generally is copyrighted, there still are exceptions. Certain things can never be copyrighted, such as ideas, facts, events, news of the day, concepts, principles, Laws of Nature, or discoveries. (I will avoid mentioning patents and trademarks, as those generally are not an issue with genealogy information.) Also not copyrightable are blank forms, plain calendars, and lists or tables taken from public documents or other common sources.

Facts cannot be copyrighted, nor can lists or tables taken from public documents or other common sources. A simple listing of dates and places of birth, marriage, and death cannot be copyrighted. These facts are public domain (in the United States but not always in other countries) and the mere republication of these facts results in more public domain data. Keep this in mind when you publish your genealogy information online or on paper. If you simply publish facts taken from public records, your publication is not copyrighted. However, if you add biographies and personal notes and other information you found by researching non-public records, the extra information you added probably does fall under copyright protection.

A compilation is a collection of works or data that receives copyright protection whether or not the works it contains fall under copyright laws. A book that contains transcribed records is a compilation. Until 1991, compilations were protected by copyrights as the authors had expended considerable effort to compile them into a new work. However, the U.S. Supreme Court threw out this "sweat of the brow" theory in its decision, "Feist Publications v. Rural Telephone Service," (499 U.S. 340). Since then, the U.S. National Genealogical Society and other organizations have worked diligently to have genealogy compilations covered by copyrights. In fact, the copyrights seem to hold up if the compilation includes originality in selecting, arranging, explaining or interpreting the original data.

For instance, if the original records of a town are difficult to read because of faded ink or poor penmanship, an expert historian with proper experience may be able to decode the information properly and then publish that interpretation of the original records. The interpretation involved constitutes originality and therefore may be copyrighted. Conversely, simply republishing data already published earlier generally does not fall under copyright. If you reprint a book containing a compilation of vital records and the original book was printed before 1923, your new publication is not copyrighted. This is true even if you rearrange the data.

At first glance one would think that most of the genealogy data published on CD-ROM or online would be free of copyright. However, a closer look at the copyright laws reveals a different picture. Publishers of CD-ROM and online databases have two weapons available to protect their data. The first is originality, added by the electronic search capabilities of their product. That is, the capability to find a specific record within 2 or 3 seconds in a large database constitutes "originality in selecting" records and is, therefore, covered by copyrights. The original data is still public domain, but the use of the producer's electronic search capabilities places restrictions on what you can do with the output. The second weapon is the software license. Whether you use a CD-ROM database or search genealogy information on the Web, you still are bound by the legal terms and conditions specified by the company who produced the software involved. In short, you cannot use their software for purposes other than what they allow.

If you see a request on a newsgroup or message board from someone asking for a "look up" of specific data for them on a particular CD-ROM, don't do it! If you post the reply, you will have broken copyright laws and may find yourself on the receiving end of an unpleasant legal document. When in doubt, consult the copyrights and the software license of the CD-ROM or online database that you are using. The different producers have different terms and conditions. Some, such as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, may allow for limited copying. Other producers do not allow for any copying at all. I am not aware of any major producer of genealogy data that allows for freely copying all the data.

You should also be aware of one exception to the otherwise stringent copyright laws, called "fair use." Fair use allows for non-infringing copying of a copyrighted work for such purposes as comment, criticism, news reporting, teaching, scholarship or research. In determining whether such use is fair, courts consider:

- 1.the purpose of the work (commercial or non-commercial)
- 2.the nature of the work
- 3.the amount used in relation to the whole work
- 4.the effect of the use on the market value of the work.

In general, copying a small amount of a work is considered fair use unless it is the heart of the work. Going back to the earlier example of responding to lookup requests on newsgroups or message boards, such activities would appear to infringe on the heart of the work and also to have a major impact on "the market value of the work." The person receiving the information from you is less likely to purchase his or her own copy of the work, so you have illegally impacted the market value of the work in question.

Some people will say, "I don't charge for it, so it's legal." Wrong! Ask any lawyer. You are infringing upon the copyrights whether you receive compensation or not.

Extracting a bit of text from a long work seems to be proper under the fair use provision. For instance, in this newsletter, you will often see me quote a few sentences from a longer work, such as a program's help file or a Web site's description of its services. My belief is that such a quote falls under the fair use section on news reporting. The amount of text quoted is small in relation to the whole work and would appear to have no impact on the market value of the work. Of course, I always attribute the work and then give a reference as to where the reader can find the original.

Let's return to the original question about your data being copyrighted. Let's assume that you post genealogy information online. Your information consists of names, dates and places. That information was obtained from public and private records. You have published facts, and facts are not covered by copyright. Someone else may legally take your data and republish it as they see fit. Yes, they may even charge for this. That may not be the answer you wanted, but the U.S. copyright laws specifically state that facts cannot be copyrighted.

But you say, "Hold on! I added originality with my diligent research and interpretation." Well, you may be correct. However, I think you will have a difficult time proving that in court if your data simply consists of names, dates and places.

Those who print books or large electronic texts generally enjoy more protection. Most of the ones I have seen do show originality and added value. Most genealogy books have extensive explanations in the text that give not only the data but also the reasons why the author believes the data to be correct. Most authors write extensively about the conditions of the times and about the events of the ancestors' lives. As such, these books would seem to fall under copyright protection. For this discussion, I will use the word "book" to include both printed and electronic texts.

Keep in mind, however, that just because a publication is copyrighted, you cannot assume that everything in the publication enjoys copyright protection. Those names, dates and places listed in the book are still facts, and as you now know, facts cannot be copyrighted. The accompanying text that explains why John is believed to be the son of Peter and Mary instead of the son of a different couple will be protected, however.

The above answers are brief and only cover the questions I hear most often. A full discussion of copyright laws would fill several of these newsletters, so I will not go further. Luckily, you can find lots of expert material online. Beware, however, of the less than expert material that you also find online.

William Reynolds born 28 Feb 1830 Wayne County, IN; died October 15, 1914 Orlando FL
1st Lieutenant Co. "K", 73rd Reg't Indiana Volunteer Infantry

The CFGS website had an Email inquiry from a man looking for the grave site of his grandfather who had come to Orlando after the Civil War and was supposedly buried in Greenwood. There was no stone but we were able to give him the small amount available from Greenwood office files. He hopes that one of you will know more. We asked him for more on the family — here is his answer:

The following article was written by Darrell L. McLain, a descendant of Silas H. Reynolds (brother of William Reynolds.)

1st Lieutenant William Reynolds
Co. "K" 73rd Reg't Indiana Volunteer Infantry

William Reynolds was born February 28, 1830 in Wayne County, IN, the sixteenth and last child of Benjamin and Anna (Cornell) Reynolds. He and his brother, Silas, enrolled into Captain Ivan N. Walker's Company "K" of the 73rd Regiment of the Indiana Volunteer Infantry in Michigan City, IN on or about the 8th day of August, 1862, to serve for a period of three years in the War of 1861. William was elected 1st sergeant, Silas was elected sergeant. On Dec. 31, 1862 they were in the line at the battle of Stone River, TN. While advancing upon the enemy, William received a gunshot wound on the left side of his head. The "minnie ball" carried away about two inches square of the outer table of his skull and about one inch square of the inner table was destroyed. He was first treated at a field hospital and then sent to the hospital in Nashville. From there he was sent home to Westville, Laporte County, IN to recuperate. Silas was severely wounded as well and spent most of the next three years in the hospital.

Miraculously, William reported back to duty, he was promoted to 1st Lieutenant Feb 18, 1863, only to be captured at Rome, GA, May 3, 1863. He was brought from Atlanta to Richmond, VA, May 16, 1863 and imprisoned at Libby Prison. (The above information has been taken from Veterans Records of the National Archives. The remaining information is from the book "Four Months in Libby" written by Captain I. N. Johnston, Co. "H" Sixth Kentucky Volunteer Infantry and published in 1864.)

"The battle of Stone River began on the 31st day of December, 1862 and continued till the evening of the 2nd day of January. On the first day our left wing was driven back and we lost about thirty pieces of artillery; but the attack of the enemy on our center was repelled with fearful slaughter, being subjected to a terrible cross-fire of double-shotted canister from two batteries and the day closed with the contest undecided. The next day the battle was renewed, our line being restored to the position it had occupied on the morning of the previous day, but without any very decisive result, the spirit of our forces remaining unbroken. On the third day attempts were made by the enemy along our whole line, but it was not till about the middle of the afternoon, however, that the crises of the battle came; both sides were using their artillery with terrible effect; at last the line of the enemy began to give way; Gen. Davis was ordered to charge across the stream from which the battle takes its name; the Colonel of the 78th Pennsylvania, with his hat on the point of his sword, led the way with a hurrah, a charge perfectly irresistible was made, the enemy's line was broken, the divisions of Beatty and Negley came up rapidly, our whole line advanced and the day was won.

Captain Johnston had been wounded at Shiloh, recovered to fight at Stone River and in the Battle of Chickamauga in September of 1863 was taken prisoner, sent to Atlanta then taken to Richmond, VA and Libby Prison. The enlisted men were sent to Belle Isle, a place which has become infamous on account of the cruel treatment to which they were subjected; but the officers had quarters assigned them in Libby Prison." Before they were assigned quarters they were told to surrender all valuables. They were assured that they would be returned when they were exchanged or released. Otherwise, if found they would be confiscated. This now world-famous building presents none of the outward characteristics of a prison, having been used in peaceful days as a warehouse; but none of the castles and dungeons of Europe, century old though they be, have a stranger or sadder history than this. The building is of brick, with a front of near one hundred and forty feet and one hundred feet deep. It is divided into nine rooms; the ceilings are low and ventilation imperfect; the windows are barred, through which the windings of James River and the tents of Belle Isle may be seen. In this building were crowded about one thousand officers of nearly every grade, not one of whom was permitted to go out till exchanged or released by death.

The prisoner's rations were so limited that there was no comparison to Union prisons. The Libby ration nominally consisted of about ten ounces of corn bread-or meal just as it came from the mill-beef and rice; but really less often than this; for it often took two rations of beef to make a single tolerable meal and frequently we would fail to get any beef for from one to eight days; at such times we would receive sweet or Irish potatoes; and I state the case very mildly when say the food was at all times insufficient.

On February 9, 1864, one of the most daring prison breaks occurred. "One hundred and nine persons thus escaped from eight o'clock at night to three in the morning, notwithstanding that the night was clear and beautiful and all had to pass between two gas lights; of these, however, only about one half succeeded in reaching the Federal lines."

Lieutenant Reynolds made his way to Trianna, AL. Because of his earlier wound, he resigned his commission and was Honorably Discharged, July 23, 1864. He returned to Westville, IN and lived there until 1880, moved to Muskegon, MI and lived there until December of 1911. He then moved to Orlando, FL. He died October 15, 1914. His family included his wife Martha D. (born 1830 in PA.); John E., born ca. 1850; Charles F., born ca. 1852; Ella M., born ca. 1855; George L., born ca. 1857; Augustus, born ca. 1860 and E. E., born ca. 1862. (Taken from 1870 census Porter Co. IN.) Darrell McLain, 223 Rethmeier Ct. Ballwin, MO 63021-4939 dlmclain1@hotmail.com

Book Review

All Together in One Place, a novel of kinship, courage and faith by Jane Kirkpatrick

In 1852, Ezra Meeker made the following entry in his Oregon Trail Diary. "One of the incidents that made a profound impression upon the minds of all: The meeting of eleven wagons returning and not a man left in the entire train; all had died, and been buried on the way, and the women returning alone."

This 406 page paperback book, published by Waterbrook Press, Colorado Springs, Colorado, is an easy to read historical novel which presents a detailed picture of the life and strife of pioneer settlers of the mid 1800's. As the wagon train, around which the story revolves, travels west along the Oregon Trail, the details of daily life are painted with a clarity that leaves the reader feeling the emotions of the time. Physical hardship, disease, bone numbing fatigue, birth, death, and the simple joys of hymns sung around a campfire at sunset, are the elements that draw you into this book. You like or dislike the characters as the result of the writer's emphasis on humanity and the commonality of everyday life. The enduring faith of the people proves to be the thread of strength which holds their fabric of life together. While not specifically a genealogy book, it can round out our images of our ancestors, and the trials and tribulations they had in their everyday lives.

This book was sent to the society for review, and was reviewed by Lynne Knorr. It will be donated to Orlando Public Library.

The Norment Family in Orlando As Known by Betty Robinson

Judge Richard Baxter Norment and his family came to Orlando from Maryland in the eighties, the eighteen eighties, that is.

They first settled at Boggy Creek and had a grove there, and their daughter Anna Beall (pronounced Belle) Norment taught in the school. There were Judge Norment, his wife Margaret Anna Ward Norment, their daughters Anna Beall and Janie, and their son Howard T.

The grove at Boggy Creek froze, and in the late 1880's the Norments built a home on the north side of Lake Lucerne and moved to Orlando. Judge Norment and Howard engaged in farming in Cherokee Park, shipping produce to points north. Those of us who knew Cherokee Park in later years could have warned him about floods there, and, sure enough, the rains came and flooded their farm.

Around the corner from the Norment family lived the West family, and in 1889 Howard married the oldest West daughter, Louisa, always known as Lulu. Howard and Lulu had a son Howard who died an infant of cholera infantum. In 1891 a daughter, Marie Theresa, was born and in 1893 another daughter, Margaret Louise.

Lulu's sister, Ella West, was married in the Norment house to Harry Bumby, the oldest son of the pioneer Bumby family. Their children were Joe, Ella and Florence who married Ben Fishback, and whose descendants include Mary Jo Fishback Ardaman and Ann Fishback Bennett of Orlando and Eloise Fishback Fisher and Harry Fishback.

Janie Norment married Richard Packwood from Winter Park or Maitland, and they had a son named Charles, who was also stricken by cholera infantum but survived. In all Janie and Richard Packwood had four children including a daughter who became an opera singer. Janie passed away at an early age, and the four children were reared by her mother and sister, Beall.

Before Aug, 1893, Beall became ill, and her older brother Richard, a doctor, came from Baltimore to see about her. He recommended that the family leave this awful, unhealthful place and they went back to Maryland — Judge Norment, Margaret Anna, Anna Beall and Janie and her husband and child. Only Howard remained behind with his wife, daughter and their expected child. When the Norments retreated to Maryland, they left everything but their clothes—furniture, silver, china, linens, even an unfinished bedspread that Margaret Anna was crocheting. Howard, Lulu and Marie moved into the house on Lake Lucerne where Lulu gave birth to Margaret Louise in 1893. Howard's family lived in the Norment house for a few years until it was sold; the rest of the Norment family never returned to Orlando.

Howard later moved to Dade County and was engaged in agriculture there. Lulu remained in Orlando and took up dressmaking to support herself and her two daughters. The girls both graduated from Orlando High School located in the old, old city hall. Marie Norment married Oliver V. Phillips and reared three children. Arthur and Evelyn are deceased and Louise married Thomas Brodwater. The Brodwaters had two daughters, Marion Elizabeth (Betty) and Vicky. Betty Brodwater Barrett lives in Kissimmee. Margaret Norment married Leonard S. Thornton and reared two daughters, Margaret Louise (Peggy), who married Jule E. Petris and lives in Jacksonville, and Marie Elizabeth (Betty) who married James C. Robinson and lives in Orlando. The Thornton grandchildren are William Thornton Petris of Jacksonville, FL, Elizabeth (Libby) Robinson Barnes and James Carson Robinson, Jr., of Orlando, and Richard Thornton Robinson of Brussels, Belgium. Lulu and Howard have five great, great grandchildren.

The Norment house is now considered the oldest house in Orlando. It has passed through several hands since then, once serving as a rehabilitation home for alcoholics. The house has been beautifully refurbished by Charles Meiner and his son, Sam, and is known at the Norment-Parry house, part of a bed and breakfast complex called The Courtyard at Lake Lucerne. There are some pictures of the house on their web site, www.orlandohistoricinn.com.

*"The Inn was built for Judge Richard B. Norment of Baltimore and his wife, Margaret Parry, between 1883 and 1885 as their permanent home. It was built at a time when Orlando was a small community with sandy roads and a largely agrarian economy. The oldest documented extant in Orlando, this two-story, Victorian structure is now a bed and breakfast. Among its original features are the ornate, typically Victorian scrollwork on the front porch columns and interior woodwork. The house was built of Florida hardwood. The L shaped structure was enlarged in the 1920s when gas lighting was installed and a summer kitchen was added. During the 19th and early 20th centuries, the house was the setting for key events in the lives of prominent Orlandoans." The Central Florida Genealogical and Historical Society, Inc. was formed in 1969 and incorporated as a non-profit organization in 1981. The Society welcomes everyone with an interest in genealogy, the history of Florida and the United States as well as our ancestral nations, to further our objectives through education and publications.

Meetings - Regular monthly meetings are held on the third Tuesday, September through May at 7:30 PM at the Beardall Senior Center, 800 S. Delaney Ave, Orlando, FL. The President designates exceptions to the date and place for meetings. All meetings are open to the public. Visitors are welcome and members are encouraged to bring guests. A daytime group meets bi-monthly on the third Thursday afternoon of odd-numbered months.

Membership:

Individual member - Year 20.00 Life - $200

Family membership - Year $25.00 Life - $300

Membership begins the first day of the month following acceptance and extends for one full year and includes a subscription to the following Society publications.

Buried Treasures, a quarterly publication, features 24 pages of articles, book reviews, Bible records, old letters, wills, etc. submitted by members. Gina Simmons Herbert designed the cover for Buried Treasures in 1989.

TITLED WOMEN

A few months ago, I was picking up the children at school, another mother I knew well rushed up to me, fuming with indignation. "Do you know what you and I are?" she demanded. Before I could answer, and I didn't really have one handy, she blurted out the reason for her question. It seemed she had just returned from renewing her driver's license at the county clerk's office. Asked by the woman recorder to state her occupation, the lady hesitated, uncertain how to classify herself. "What I mean is," explained the recorder, do you have a job, or are you just a . . .?" "Of course I have a job," she snapped. "I'm a mother." "We don't list 'mother' as an occupation; 'housewife' covers it," said the recorder.

I forgot all about her story until one day I found myself in the same situation, this time at our own town hall. The clerk was obviously a career woman -- poised, efficient, and possessed of a high-sounding title like "official interrogator" or "town registrar." "What is your occupation?" she probed. What made me say it, I do not know. The words simply popped out. "I'm a research associate in the field of child development and human relations."

The clerk paused, ball-pen frozen in midair, and looked up as though she had not heard right. I repeated the title slowly, emphasizing the most significant words. Then I stared with wonder as my pronouncement was written in bold, black ink on the questionnaire. Might I ask," said the clerk with new interest, "just what you do in your field?" Coolly, without any trace of fluster in my voice, I heard myself reply, "I have a continuing program of research (what mother doesn't) in the laboratory and in the field (normally I would have said indoors and out). I'm working for my Masters (the whole darned family) and already have four credits (all daughters). Of course, the job is one of the most demanding in the humanities (any mother care to disagree?) and I often work 14 hours a day (24 is more like it). But the job is more challenging than most run-of-the-mill careers and the rewards are more of satisfaction than money."

There was an increasing note of respect in the clerk's demeanor as she completed the form, stood up, and personally ushered me to the door. As I pulled into our driveway, buoyed by my glamorous new career, I was greeted by my lab assistants -- ages 13, 7, and 3. Upstairs I could hear our experimental model (6 months) in the child-development program testing a new vocal pattern. I felt triumphant. I had scored a best on bureaucracy. And I had gone on the official records as someone more distinguished and indispensable to mankind than just another mother. Motherhood, what a glorious career, especially with a title on the door. From Missing Links: RootsWeb's Genealogy Journal, Vol. 6, No. 19, 9 May 2001 [as we read "housewife" as the occupation of every one of our female ancestors -- just think of this sent to us by CFGS member Anne Connell.]
